

Remembering the Past

In the book A Kind of Spark Addie, the main character, is learning about the witch trials that took place in the 16th to 18th Centuries in Scotland. Addie becomes very interested in the stories of the women from her home village who were tried for witchcraft all those hundreds of years ago. She is determined to create a memorial so that people won't forget them.

Has anything ever happened in your home town that you want everyone to remember?

You could talk to your family or your teachers to find out about anything special that has happened where you live.

- What would you do to remember the event or the people?
- Would you create a statue? A plaque? A mural?
- What images would you include?
- What would you say?
- Where would you put what you have created?

Draw your designs, including any text or labels to fully explain the details.
