

Mapping an imaginary land.

If you open The Land of Roar, on the 4th and 5th page you can see a wonderful drawing of a map. This map is of the imaginary Land of Roar that Arthur and Rose made when they were younger. In their map they included all of their favourite places such as the sea, castles, mountains and forests. If you look closely you can spot lots of beautiful creatures too, like birds, butterflies, unicorns and mermaids. Can you spot any others?

Now your challenge is to make your own map of your very own imaginary land! Think about the following things:

What would you call your land?

What kind of places will there be?

What kind of creatures live there?

Where will you live? Does anybody live there with you?

What kind of things can you do there?

If you reach page 14 in your book you will read that Arthur begins to describe the Land of Roar when he finds the map with his sister. It might give you some inspiration while creating yours!

Draw your map and imagine your adventures in your imaginary land.
